

Remembering the First World War

Hello again,
Thank you to everyone for their get well wishes, I am on the mend and it is almost business as usual! I will be sending out my regular email newsletter in the next few days.
This is a special newsletter because this weekend marks the start of the First World War one hundred years ago; there are a series of events in Broxtowe and a national commemoration on Monday evening.
I hope you will take some time out to remember the start of the First World War and the loss of millions of men and women in that terrible conflict which began on August 4th 1914.

"Lights Out"

Westminster Abbey will be the focal point on Monday evening when between 10pm and 11pm we are all asked to turn off our lights leaving on just one candle or light as a symbol of reflection and hope. The Royal British Legion hopes one million candles will be lit to remember all those British service men and women who died in the First World War.
